Rob Lowe has been on the Conception many times.

Captain confirmed as lying to dispatcher about access to fire extinguishers.

1 stairway and 1 emergency hatch to lower hold blocked.

Anon has determined without a doubt that something fishy is going on with this boat.

>The Conception, based in Santa Barbara Harbor on the mainland, was owned by Truth Aquatics, a Santa Barbara-based company founded in 1974. Dave Reid, who runs an underwater camera manufacturing business with his wife, Terry Schuller, and has traveled on the Conception and two other boats in Truth Aquatics' fleet, said he considered all three among the best and safest.

>“When you see the boats they are always immaculate,” he said. “I wouldn’t hesitate at all to go on one again. Of all the boat companies, that would be one of the ones I wouldn’t think this would happen to.”

>His wife said Truth Aquatics crews have always been meticulous in going over safety instructions at the beginning of every trip she’s been on.

>“They tell you where the life jackets are, how to put them on, the points of egress, the exits, where the fire extinguishers are, on every single trip,” said Schuller, who goes on diving expeditions often with her husband. “They are the best, the absolute best.”

There were multiple fire extinguishers, confirmed by video.

There were two, maybe 3 exits from the hold, also confirmed by video.

According to company founder, yacht had been upgraded and was fully modern, which means it had a smoke alarm and sprinkler systems in the galley as well. The galley was directly above the stairs to the hold.

Big 70ft yacht with almost 40 people on it burns with 33 people locked in the hold.

Hold had stairs up into a room with a sprinkler system, and an emergency hatch to the deck. Multiple fire extinguishers on board.

Evidence points to some extremely foul play, no one has been identified and they are still fishing for bodies.

Happened next to an island owned by billionaire pedovores, probably where Epstein is hiding.

There very well could be something nefarious going on, but your approaching it all wrong and with no knowledge of boats or boating, which makes you seem retarded.

The boat wasn't even at capacity, much less over it. Anything that would have been occurring outside would not have been noticed by the people below deck, so they didn't "see" anything. By all mean, look for possible motive and enjoy the theorizing, but stop sounding like a schizo retard.

You don't get cell service on the ocean. You usually lose it 10 miles from land, sometimes 15. There is no way to call anyone after that but the VHF radio or sat service, which only the captain would probably have access to at 3 AM. The passengers were all in their bunks, probably napping. There would have been preparations for breakfast occurring at 3 AM, which is probably what started the fire. When there is a fire on board a vessel you abandon that vessel. You don't run to a radio. All the lifeboats should have had transponder units on them.

Human-on-dolphin sex is not really that weird
Margaret Howe Lovatt was attacked for admitting that she stimulated a dolphin. But what she did isn't that unusual

184

TRACY CLARK-FLORY
JUNE 15, 2014 3:00AM (UTC)
It is safe to say that Margaret Howe Lovatt will from here on out be known as the woman who had “sex” with a dolphin.

This week, the media went nuts over revelations in a BBC documentary about Lovatt's interactions with a male dolphin during a NASA-funded experiment in the 1960s. “He would rub himself on my knee, my foot or my hand and I allowed that,” she said. "I wasn't uncomfortable, as long as it wasn't too rough. It was just easier to incorporate that and let it happen." Eventually, it became routine. "It would just become part of what was going on, like an itch, just get rid of that scratch and we would be done and move on,” she said. During the segment, a narrator intones, "Margaret felt the best way of focusing his mind back on the lessons was to relieve his desires herself, manually." She makes sure to clarify: "It was sexual on his part, it was not sexual on mine -- sensual perhaps."

the subtitle says "29 BOP" but it sounds like "please don't kill me"

I can't find an appropriate acronym definition for BOP or 29 BOP.

Normal protocol is mayday, situation and location. Something like "Mayday, fire on the Conception at 34.xxx 119.xxx." So in order for it to make any sense, 29 BOP would have to be some kind of coordinate.

I have no conspiracies to contribute other than to say most of you fucks have zero understanding of boats or anything nautical. I have been fishing on a 50 ft Viking right in this area. West of San Clemente island. It's a popular fishing/diving area desu. Not much 'conspiracy' with the Channel Islands I'm aware of growing up out here.

That boat would easily sleep the numbers claimed. As mentioned above, they pack them like sardines. Bunk beds three high along the walls and a row down the middle. As far as the fire safety measures. Not a clue...

Also in previous threads anons were saying ‘middle of the night’ who dives at night, etc. again, no clue how this shit works. 1. People dive at night all the fucking time. 2. Even if they weren’t diving at night, it’s a multi day excursion. They anchor overnight so right when everyone wakes up...you are already where you want to be instead of having to travel for two hours from the mainland to get out there. Pretty standard.

The victim list and whether they are ‘locked’ in the hull is the only part that intrigues me. The rest is pretty mundane shit.

As a diver who has been on a boat that sunk, in general divers are pretty level headed and comfortable in the water. However, zero visibility is zero visibility. If you aren't already mentally prepared for it, which sleeping divers would not be, you are going to have a hard time getting bearings to escape.

SFGate (San Francisco Chronicle) has several indepth articles and some fairly knowledgable follow up comments, including the following from a prior guest on this ship: ......" I was recently on this boat - earlier this summer. A comprehensive safety briefing was conducted by the captain and all passengers aboard were required to be present. The captain shared the procedure for deploying life boats, basic emergency radio operation, the location of life jackets, and the location of two bunk room exits – a stairay towards the bow and an escape hatch near the stern of the boat. The briefing also discussed the alarms on board, underwater alarms, and location of fire extinguishers. It was done within the galley at the site of the emergency escape hatch, a roughly two-feet by two-feet square plank of wood with no lock or latch on it that leads to the bunks below...."

Nope. I live up in Washington state now. It's been years since I've been on those boats but my father, on the other hand, was just on the Conception a couple of time this summer for lessons. I was really surprised to see this in the news because those boats were really well run. Some people have said, "Why would they pack so many people in a boat" or are already going into Epstein connections. All boats that run characters for dive trips will try to max out their occupancy. That's very common. The other thing is everytime they begin their overnight trips, they make every passenger look at every escape route, just like on airplanes.

As for the Epstein connection, I don't know. I honestly believe this is just a horrible accident. The crew, of course, was the first to get off. Their quarters are on the main deck below the bridge. The sleeping quarters were below deck and I want to see from memory that there was only one entry/exit way next to the kitchen.

I do however, think something shady af happened. I just don't know what.
Yes, from the layout of the boat they have on their website, the only stairs are through the Galley which even as someone who doesn't go on boats, that seems like a fucking dumb idea.

Also, they said that no one was cooking that early yet & that the Galley has sprinkles & smoke alarms.
Curious what exploded.

If there are no relatives screaming about missing family members you can be assured this was human trafficking and the ship was set on fire to cover it...perhaps they feared they were close to being caught. But I've read situations where they will kill all the trafficking victims and send the ship to the bottom to avoid being caught with them.

There was some situation up in the great lakes where ships were moving kids around. Fuck it I can remember, it's in there I just can't shake it loose...but the ship was destroyed to destroy all the evidence and the case kind of went away. There were photos from people with vacation cabins who noticed the strange boat and the kids.

If there was a fuel leak in the engine room, then possibly fuel vapors, but the ship had been upgraded, maintained and inspected regularly.

I don't think there was an explosion until after the fire started heating up air tanks. Boats don't just randomly explode these days, hasn't really been a "thing that happens" in a couple hundred years. Fuel leak and propane leak are the only two possible sources of an explosion, also two things engineers try to make impossible when they are designing things. It just isn't a plausible explanation, it would have woken everyone the fuck up before the flames started to spread as well.

This ‘stat’ might be a bit disingenuous. California Law changed a couple years ago that made most every Tyrone pimp into a ‘human trafficker’

Same set of facts for a pimp/prostitute relationship 5 years ago would have gotten the pimp a year in custody at half time for pimping and pandering. The prostitute would get 90 days for 647b. Now with the new laws. The pimp is looking at 15 to life as ‘ human trafficker’ and the prostitute is a victim and gets free .gov assistance now. That is what I believe is artificially inflating all these ‘human trafficking’ stats

Yachts normally only allow 12 guests
Even large superyachts (150ft+) that cost tens of millions only have facilities for 12 guests.

The reason is that any vessel with more than 12 guests must be classified as a passenger ship and comply with regulations like SOLAS, which is impossible for most yachts.

The first thing I thought when I saw this piece of crap is, how did it have more than 12 passengers on board?

There is only one entrance and it is tight below. Pretty sure it has diesel engines. Fumes would not ignite. Tanks not really flammable either.

Importing slaves was banned in the US in 1808. Not that they enforced it hardcore until the late 1830's. Just made slavers treat some slaves better: marry and be treated well enough to have kids. A fine point perhaps.

>If an oxygen tanks valve was left open it could spark explosions. That's what happened with the plane that crashed in the swamps of Florida.

When you dive you dont use pure oxygen unless you are a navy sabotage diver. If you use pure oxygen, your max diving depth is limited to 30-35 feet but the upside of using pure oxygen is that you can use a carbon dioxide scrubber setup that leaves no telltale bubbles on the surface, hence why it is used by military divers. Oxygen does not cause explosions because oxygen is not burnable since it is the second strongest electrophiliac element. Things burn when they are combined with oxygen. I dont even need to look at your country flag to know that you are an american because this oxygen is explosive meme comes from hollywood and only americans are so daft that they think that what they see in fictional entertainment is real. Now go to your local holocaust museum and ponder on what I just said.

It will only do that if the pressure inside the containment vessel is so strong that the gas has turned into a liquid. When a gas tube with liquified non-explosive gas is put into fire the liquid starts to boil and the pressure inside the tank eventually causes it to burst. When you increase the pressure the boiling point of a liuqid increases so superhot liquid at a temperature above boiling temperature now sprays out in a big aerosol cloud instantly turning to vapor - thats your "explosion".

what the heck. that crazy. There has to be at least 1 exit. youd think at least 1 person would manage to get the hatch open. here is something I cant figure out.. some of the bodies were found 90 miles away, but the photos the show in the news articles still show it afloat hours later after the fire is out.

Everything was already there, he just circled it. And I think wrote on the inside on some of his trailers. Just bible quotes. Ok, this is weird as fuck., we may have something worth digging into here...

Relisha Rudd has been missing for more than a year, but the search for the Washington, D.C. girl may have just gotten a major break.

This week, search crews combing the Anacostia River uncovered a bag that may have important clues about the 8-year-old's resting place.

Rudd's suspected killer, Kahlil Tatum, committed suicide in a park near the river. Tatum was last seen with Relisha in the park in 2014.

Tatum worked as a janitor at the homeless shelter where Relisha lived with her family. He had permission from the girl's family to be with her, but after Relisha was absent from school for several days, suspicions began to arise. Police would later say that Tatum was posing as Relisha's doctor for school officials, telling them about her absence.

The next day, Tatum's wife was found shot to death, and police issued a search warrant for Tatum's arrest. He would later commit suicide, and the search for the still-missing Rudd went cold.

But now, there may be a major break in the search. Police said Tatum purchased a container of black garbage bags, which they believe may have been used to dispose of her body.

Search crews said they found a bag during their search, but have not yet said what it contained.

"I was shocked that it was right there," said Jerry Boylan, captain of the Garden State Underwater Recovery Unit.

Why does the map say Conception, Angols, Los Angeles, have two x's on the map, and come from a group that is tied to Cocaine Trafficking in South America ?

Because there is a continual manipulation of events going on that are planned ahead of time.

These are their maps to plans for operations.

Really my first day. I didn't know what people were talking about just a few hrs ago. I thought I read 1 person or maybe two survived from below deck. But a locked door might be...well not sure why'd it'd have locks in the first place. Maybe a few people broke through it, if it's some flimsy door. In my apartment the bedrooms don't have locks. Domestic reasons landlords and builders knew long ago.

Hey Finnish Faggot

There is a Cocaine Trafficking network operating with the US Military commanding their movements.....in order to get their shipments into this country they have to go around the mass of investigators and DEA that are watching them.

When a shipment gets busted, they kill indiscriminately, and use maps to plot a course around their affairs.

In this case a kid went missing in 2017 in Chile, like Bruno Borges did in Brasil, and they created a series of "puzzles" that were made by their masters....who drop them online behind the death of the innocents....

When the map lines up over the city along the coast, and the instructions are "to learn to read the map" then you take note of the cities, mountains, and the other themes in the "cipher" and you can track their movements across the globe

Even Google is getting into it.

You can't make sense of it because you are a fucking troll and you have no sense of reality staring at a screen.

He had a bottle of Grey Poupon that he had stolen from the Conception's galley. (I couldn't make that up) He is lucky he wasn't shot. The base was crawling with security armed with machine guns. Of course they are moving Cocaine into the San Pedro ports

They got busted and this was their vengeance plot to create a distraction from the replacement shipments headed for Hollywood

Scott Wolters and his "Cremona" Map from Oak Island was the key to this crematorium that they created

They dropped these maps and planned their routes out to port

When they were busted they act out their vengeance and attack the people

These attacks all relate to their shipments.

There are dozens of them

Why was a homeless person stealing Grey Poupon from a boat, riding around an AFB on a bike labeled after the boat he stole, when they were launching classified projects. Then this happens, with maybe the passengers locked underneath? It's also an interesting name sir, Conception.

Do cocaine traffickers use maps? Sure.

Do they murder people? Also sure.

Do they work with some branch of the US government? I don't know for sure, but I wouldn't rule it out. I know the Reagan/Bush/North gang worked with them; there's a strong tie between cocaine use and far-right ideology in the States, too, and a strong link between right-wing politics and a desire to get involved in border enforcement. They DEFINITELY have the occasional corrupt American official on their payroll.

Do they leave scavenger hunt clues like the fucking Riddler? Nope.

Is that image in any way convincing of, well, anything? No. Neither is Slightly off-topic: In the first thread someone brought up the MS Scandinavian Star fire. It was clearly arson based on the fires being started in trashpiles in hallways, but who was the culprit? Three separate fires were set: one at midnight that was found and put out; one at two that burned out half of the ship and began the emergency; one six hours later when most of the passengers had already been evacuated and mostly just crew were onboard.

Option A: thrice-convicted arsonist was aboard pro- he was a serial arsonist, a firebug, and this was arson counter- he was supposedly killed in his berth by the second fire and would not have been able to start the third Option B: crew member(s) did it, possibly for insurance, or maybe one of the crewmen was a firebug pro- ship had recently been re-insured for 2x value pro- multiple fire doors were propped open pro- third fire began in a pile of mattresses under a "cut" hydraulic line counter- it's hard to pull off a conspiratorial insurance fraud fire with a bunch of contract crewmen, least of all without anybody talking and getting you caught counter-counter- one or two crewmen who were company employees could have done it without the rest of the crew being involved or even realizing what was going on counter- the investigator who claimed the hydraulic line was "cut" could just be full of shit

So there's two very plausible explanations.
